George Zoglio, CPA

Instructor, CAAS & Professional Development

George has dedicated his career to building knowledge and expertise in the fields of accounting, auditing, financial planning, analysis and management as well as interpersonal professional development skills. He has an innate ability to communicate these topics in “plain English”, resulting in effective and engaging learning experiences for participants.

When it comes to CAAS, he doesn’t just “talk the talk”, he also provides accounting and advisory services to SMB.

George is a Certified DiSC® Practitioner. His personal development teaching philosophy is grounded in the belief that communication and emotional intelligence serve as the foundation for success in developing the necessary suite of “soft” skills such as effective feedback, time and project management, team development, motivating others and effective conflict resolution.

A resident of Boston, MA, he is a graduate of Bryant University receiving both a BS degree and an MBA. He is also a member of the AICPA.
